HOW BEST MANAGED FARM IS OPERATED

PROF. WEST PAYS VISIT TO SUNNY VALLEY FARM WAUKESHA SHA COUNTY.

NOTES SALIENT POINTS

Finds Reasons for Success of This Dairy Farm in Recent Farm Management Contest.

(By Allen B. West).

In company with the members of the class in farm management doing field work in Waukesha county the writer visited Sunny Valley Farm, the home of Win. M. Jones, winner of the first prize in the state farm management contest, in competition with one hundred and fifty farmers in eleven different counties who participated in this contest which lasted one year and closed June 1st, 1914.

The awards were made according to the following score card:

Managerial ability ..... 50 points
Maintenance of fertility ..... 20 points
Health of herd ..... 20 points
General appearance ..... 5 points

The awards were further determined by a committee which visited the farms and inspected them, together with carefully kept records showing the farm operations and receipts and expenditures for the year.

The managerial income (that is income received after deducting 5 per cent of investment) of this farm being $4,781.35, it is well worth finding out how it was managed to secure this sum.

The Sunny Valley Farm is located in the beautiful rolling country three miles west of Waukesha. It consists of 163 acres, and the soil is mostly black clay loam. It is valued at $100 per acre, which may seem to some a low valuation. It has besides 1 1/2 acres of waste, however, a considerable land not tillable, being marsh. This is utilized as pasture, for the farm is a dairy farm.

The buildings on the farm are valued at $7,420, the house and barn both having been recently remodeled, the house alone being valued at $3,000. The acetylene lighting plant supplying light for the house and barn is valued at $350, and the water system at $500. Making a total investment of $24,570 in real estate.

The business of the farm is the supplying of cream to the Milwaukee market, the cream being shipped to the city daily in cans. To supply this cream there are kept on the farm a herd of pure bred Guernseys, with some grades. To maintain the herd at a high standard for production there is at the head of Waukesha, ten years of age, a sire whose dam has a record of 28 pounds of butter in a seven day test. Two other pure bred Guernsey bulls are also kept, the three being valued at $600 apiece, the rest of the herd being as follows:

23 pure bred cows at $100 each.
2 pure bred heifers at $250 each.
23 pure bred calves at $100 each.
2 grade heifers at $100 each.

During the year fourteen (14) dairy animals were purchased, including six pure bred calves, to which were fed the surplus skimmed milk, the best of them being kept for the herd and the others sold. On the average twenty-seven cows were milked during the year. Something of the quality of these cows as to production may be judged from the fact that the average amount received from each cow from sale of cream was $123 and from the fact that four cows which were under test during the year produced the following amount of milk during the year:

One of them which freshened in December, 1913, giving now, July 1st, 1914, seventy-six (76) pounds of milk daily. Another cow was devoted to pure bred corn for the grain, 18 to oats, 2 to alfalfa, 1 to oat hay and peas for soiling crop, 1/2 acre for stock feed, and 22 acres for silage corn, with 2 acres of alfalfa. There were 12 acres of alfalfa and 12 of clover. With these crops it was not necessary to buy $247 of feed for the year.

Aside from the calves raised a market for the skimmed milk was afforded by the raising of pigs, the year beginning with one boar and three brood sows.

There were eight (8) horses kept on the farm, of which one was a brood mare and two driving horses. The expense of their keeping was offset somewhat by the colts.

The amount of help required is recorded as three and one-half men, which is given as an average for the year.

While there were a number of minor items of profit such as those on hogs, potatoes (100 bushels at 63c per bushel), eggs ($150, etc.), showing careful management, the main profit of the farm comes from the sale of market cream and the sale of stock, as follows:

From market cream ..... $5,637.60
From stock ..... 4,777.00
Less: Depreciation on stock ..... 1,000.00
Results largely the increase for the year and not a large reduction in the amount of stock, the reduction being only in value amounting to $845.

In studying the work of the farm some items of importance are noted.

1st—The farm is well located as to market facilities.

2nd—The farm is of average size.

3rd—The operations of the farm all center about the one object—the production of market cream.

4th—The fertility of the farm is not reduced by selling crops (with the exception of the 100 bushels of potatoes).

5th—The fertility of the farm is increased by the stock kept.

6th—The crops raised are such as to supply the herd with a balanced ration without the purchase of expensive protein foods.

7th—The cows kept are good producers and of good breed, the claim being made that the Guernseys produce butter fat cheaper than any other breed.

8th—Pure bred stock of quality being kept the stock that must be produced in order to supply milk is sold at a profit greater even than that secured from the sale of cream, in this case averaging $150 per cow.

9th—The well equipped, modern home shows that home life has not been sacrificed to money making.

large farm in order to make farming profitable.

2nd—There is a direct relation between the number of cows kept and the receipts.

3rd—There is a direct relation between the growing alfalfa and the profit from the farm.

4th—There is direct relation between the amount of fixed capital, that is, investments in land, buildings, etc., and the operating capital, that is, investments in cattle, horses and machinery.

This last point with reference to fixed and operating capital is an important one in farm management, because it shows the weak spot in many farms. Investigation proves that in order to make profitable use of one's fixed capital the operating capital must be sufficient for economical management. On the ten best farms in the contest this capital was 27.27 per cent of the fixed capital, on the ten poorest farms, whose managerial income was by the way, $7,177 less than the best, the operating capital was 21.8 per cent of fixed capital.

In the case of Mr. Jones the operating capital was 48 per cent of the fixed capital if the writer's notes are correct, a large investment but one amply justified by the returns.

WISCONSIN FARMERS SEE FAT HARVESTS

Crop Prospects Were Never Better According to Prof. R. A. Moore.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., July 9.—Wisconsin crop prospects are the rosiest ever, according to Prof. R. A. Moore, noted farm authority of the state college of agriculture. Never have they looked better, he said. Corn is somewhat backward, but the present hot spell will bring it up to standard. Oats, barley, wheat and rye are in splendid condition, and winter wheat is advancing in a way to delight the farmers.

The hay crop, which Prof. Moore pronounced "immense," is nearly harvested. All sections of the state share in the general crop prosperity.

"MOVIES" HURTING PUGILISTIC GAME

Hal Sheridan Gives Views on Late Dope in Fight Game. Will Gunboat Smith Defeat Johnson?

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

(By Hal Sheridan.)

New York, July 9.—The movie man is hurting the fight game. Surely it must be the movie man, let's say it on somebody. In London a week from today Gunboat Smith will try to land with his dreamland punch on some vital point on the anatomy of Georges Carpentier, French heavyweight champion of Europe.

Smith has become a society bug and holds receptions in London now and then arrayed in full evening dress. Carpentier, referee, appeared at the recent laments Parisian sparring party daintily arrayed in white tennis flannels. Right fans everywhere are more skeptical than ever, since the Paris affair, regarding the possibilities of another real honest to heaven championship fight, and they are wondering already whether this next big event will be a mere social event.

In Paris, Johnson and Moran smiled obligingly into the camera, and Johnson, getting the lions share of the proceeds and all the movie money, has something like $100.00 to dispose of before he can be expected to take any live interest in things pugilistic—thereabout—again.

The proposed Johnson-Langford bout in London in October may be an interesting sparring match, but the Boston black is fat and can't show anything recently, and despite Johnson's widely discussed decrepit condition he will have an easy lead over his opponent.

Johnson's lack of the old stuff, as demonstrated in the Moran fight, has centered attention on Gunboat Smith. The American fighter, although he fell for the boiled shirt stuff and was a social lion for a day or two, is reported to be in good shape and to have been only mildly affected by the demoralizing influence of society life. According to all accounts Smith will be something of a rough customer still when he climbs through the ropes to face the Frenchman.

Smith found Langford easy picking. Langford attempted to come back and it was vigorously reported that he had gotten rid of his fat and might yet be a dangerous customer, but the fat is still there, and the Boston tar baby is still slow. Smith mauled Moran unmercifully in their San Francisco fight, and the Pittsburgher hurried out of town the next day without waiting to be interviewed. Then Moran came back strong—in print. But it was generally reported that he needed boxing lessons when he tangoed with Jack Johnson in Paris.

The current has the sentiment of these United States behind him strong as the leading White Hoper, and a White Hoper who if he can swing the matches should take both Carpentier and Johnson into camp within the next few months and solve the riddle. That Smith will knock out any fighter who will let him get within reach, is the claim of his backers. If the movie men and their cash can be kept from further "humanizing" and de-brutalizing the fighting game by making it too profitable and by turning alleged championship fights into dramatic Friday afternoon of the school day type—if these many ifs, then we MAY have a championship fight some day in which Gunboat Smith will prove that he is the rising light and that the black Texan's sun has set.

Sport Snap Shots

Young Ahearn, Dan McKetrick's protegee, may be matched to box Carpentier, the French champ, sometime within another several months. When Ahearn first went abroad under McKetrick's care he was a slim youngster with no record to speak of and all his rep to make. Since being in Europe, however, he has grown appreciably, being now a heavy middleweight and a fast and clever boxer. His K. O. over Badoud, the Swiss champ, made an impression in European fight circles, and it is thought that he will soon be climbing to the top of his class. The advancement he has made since fighting on the continent is nothing short of wonderful, as he was scarcely a third rater when he first started out with McKetrick. Man, declare that he will yet be McKetrick's best bet but he has many a piece of change for his manager. His next bout is with Private Braddock in October. There is some doubt as to whether Ahearn will be able to make the middle class poundage, as he is fast growing into the heavy class. Dan Morgan, by the way, recently turned his interests in Ahearn over to McKetrick and it isn't unlikely that within a short time Morgan will have reason to regret it.

The greatest harm the Feds have done to the other major leagues, says Joe Tinker, has been their swiping as many pitchers as they could. The Feds in starting their league realized that batters can be developed, but it is not always an easy matter to develop pitchers. So they took as many as they possibly could. In addition to this, surely major leaguers as any other league in the country and moreover, that his Chicago Fed team was capable of going after the fastest team in either the National or American league and playing them to a standstill.

Baltimore has decided to stick in the International league. President Dunn is still to remain, retaining the controlling interest in the club and managing it. Only a few short days ago Dunn was ready to quit in disgust, having become soured on the fans for the manner in which they deserted his team to root for the Feds.

Pittsburgh has signed a recruit pitcher named Kase. And Jimmy Callahan has a young outfielder named Demmitt. It is such things as this that make it hard for some to believe that baseball is becoming more refined.

Joe Riggert, the outfielder grabbed by the Cardinals when the Brooklyn Dodgers asked waivers on him, is a barber in Kansas City during the winter season.

Eddie Collins in a magazine story spoke of Vean Gregg, the Nop twirler, as the "left-handed Walter Johnson," but thus far it has not been heard that any one has mentioned Walter Johnson as the "right-handed Vean Gregg."

BELOIT BASEBALL PLAYER IN CITY THIS MORNING

Eddie Gharitty of Beloit, was in the city this morning enroute to Lake Waubesa for a day's outing, before returning east to continue play with the Dayton, Ohio, club. Gharitty is one of the first string catchers for the Dayton club, and is making a rapid rise in the baseball profession. The Beloit player is well known in

CHICAGO TEAMS ARE HITTING MERRY CLIP

Cubs and Sox, Both in Second Place, Are Making Desperate Attempt to Reach Top—Chiefs Safe.

Baseball fans, not only in Chicago, but throughout the country, are of the opinion that the three major league teams, namely the Cubs, Sox and Chiefs, all hailing from the Windy city, and in the National, American and Federal leagues respectively, are going to all be safely tucked away in first position at the close of the present season. Whether this be true or not two months from now, it is almost a certainty at the present time. The three clubs are fighting as they never fought before, and if no hardships are to be met with, for a week at least, first place will be named Chicago, Chicago, and Chicago again.

The Chiefs are leading the Federal league at present by a three game lead. This is too close to be safe, as judged by baseball experts. The Horstlers are in second place and are making as strong a showing as are even Joe's men. Tinker is confident of holding fast at the top and when Joe makes such a statement everybody knows that he means it.

The White Sox are now in second place by their double victory over the Red Hoes at Boston yesterday. Comiskey is depending on his pitching staff largely, for he believes that his swatters can take care of themselves when the hurling is O. K. Since the mighty Chase jumped to the east, the Sox have won consistently, strange to say. The Sox look back to 1906 every day, with the best hopes of getting there again, to battle with the National league top-notchers, preferably the Cubs for the world's title.

The Cubs are pushing the Giants out of top place, and will succeed in another week, if the next series with New York is to be better than an even break for the misfit outfit belonging to O'Day. The pitchers for the West Siders are woefully weak in comparison to the league rivals, but their hitting is no small sensation.

"Zim" is coming back with his long swats, which have figured largely in wins for his team during the Cub's recent eastern trip.

Three pennants for Chicago is now no idle dream of the fans. With the Federals looking great in their league, and the Cubs and Sox gradually pushing the Giants and Athletics out of their seats, a new era in the history of the national pastime is being looked forward to, namely a triangular fight for the world's championship in the Windy city.

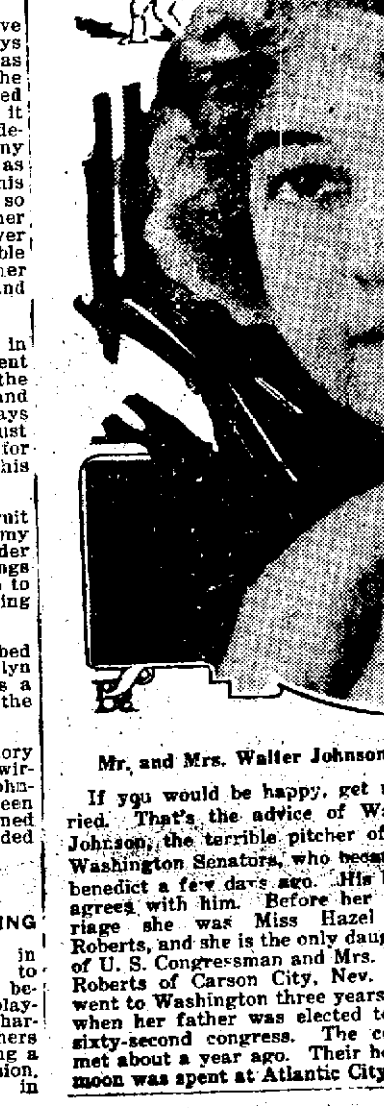

It is prodigious the quantity of good that may be done by one man if he will make a business of it.—Benjamin Franklin.

WALTER JOHNSON THINKS IT'S JUST GREAT TO BE MARRIED; WIFE AGREES

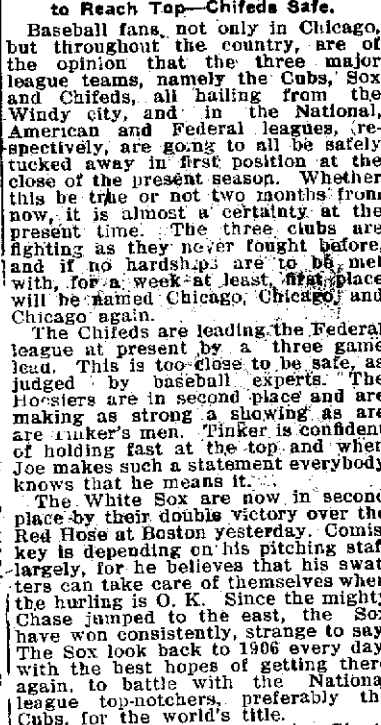

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Johnson.

If you would be happy, get married. That's the advice of Walter Johnson, the terrible pitcher of the Washington Senators, who became a benedict a few days ago. His bride agreed with him. Before her marriage she was Miss Hazel Lee Roberts, and she is the only daughter of U. S. Congressman and Mrs. E. E. Roberts of Carson City, Nev. She went to Washington three years ago when her father was elected to the sixty-second congress. The couple met about a year ago. Their honeymoon was spent at Atlantic City.

"DYING" FEDS HAVE STRANGE ATTRACTION FOR MAJOR STARS; CHASE AND AMES AMONG THOSE WHO MAY FOLLOW MARSANS

The new Federal league, which has been proclaimed as completely and utterly dead by major league magazines, still seems to exercise a strange influence over major league stars. Now it is said that some of the best men in the major leagues have in mind hurdling to the Feds. Among them are First Baseman Hal Chase of Chicago White Sox and Leon Ames of the Cincinnati Reds. Recently Armando Marsans and Pitcher Dave Davidson of the Reds cast their lot with the Federals, to the great dismay of Manager Herzog.

BULL OR BEAR.

That the general depression of business is felt all along the line is most certain and all the explaining that is being done down at Washington is not helping affairs one bit. In fact, "Sugar," a trade magazine, sizes up the present situation as follows:

"It is not recorded, as far as known, whether, during the progress of the original seven plagues that visited Egypt, Pharaoh gave out interviews and delivered addresses characterizing the depressions as 'merely psychological.' If he did not, they were spared that at least."

"The address delivered before the group of Virginia editors at the White House, on June 25, in the light of the big Chaffin collapse in New York and the thin ice that any number of business concerns are skating over, brings to mind a story that went the rounds not long ago. In his address President Wilson said:

"We are in the presence of a business situation which is variously interpreted. Here in Washington, through the bureau of commerce and other instrumentalities that are at our disposal and through a correspondence which comes to us from all parts of the nation, we are perhaps in a position to judge of the actual condition of business better than those can judge who are at any other single point in the country."

"The story runs that two men going through a field got into the line of vision of a rampaging gentleman cow, who started after them. One of the tourists sprang upwards into a tree and the other dodged into a cave. Before long the gentleman of the cave dashed out and sailed around the field with the bull in pursuit. The tree man was an interested spectator. Just as things were getting desperate the other man vanished into the cave again. After repeating this performance several times the audience up the tree was heard to remark:

"Say, you imbecile, why don't you stay in your cave?"

"The cave man paused long enough on his rounds to remark: 'Oh, dry up, you don't know what's in that cave. I do. I just came out. There's a bear in there.'"

"President Wilson may be honest in his beliefs and his plans for helping out a bad situation, but just as the bear was not merely psychological but a painful reality to the cave man, so is the present exceedingly uncomfortable condition of business in the United States a very real thing. Nobody knows his own business better than the man who runs it. He may not have any general theories, but he does know when his business is unsatisfactory and the suggestions and plans and advice of the individual up a tree on the outskirts is superfluous."

WHAT IS NEXT?

With the Mexican trouble as far from settlement as ever. With American troops hemmed in at Vera Cruz, Huerta reported ready to flee the country to escape his insurgent soldiers who are ripe for a revolt. Villa and Carranza ready to fly at each other's throats at the least excuse, and the southern Mexican revolutionists offering to fight any and all who get in their way, the situation has not changed much in the past few weeks except that if trouble really comes the United States is in no better condition to cope with the situation than it was in the very beginning when the watchful, waiting policy caused the invasion of Mexico, the loss of human life, that a cargo of munitions of war be not landed. Now comes word from the Philippines that the native leaders are planning a revolt. That they have obtained arms and ammunition from Japan, landed at isolated spots of the coasts of the many islands, that on a certain night the cable is to be cut, murderous bands are to strike down all Americans, and the Filipino is to declare his independence amid a carnival of carnage and murder. How true this report is can not be learned without careful inquiry, but it is certain that the Philippine question is one that needs attention. Japan is tired of waiting for an explanation that is unsatisfactory of the California land law and may press for an answer at any time and even demand one. This with the Mexican situation in its present condition makes matters even more complex than ever and needs the hands of men versed in state affairs and not chaotauqua performers running the nation.

SELF-SATISFIED

If the candidates for the various state and legislative offices who are already in the field feel self-satisfied that they are the only persons qualified to cope with the situation in Wisconsin they are laboring under a mistaken idea. The average voter has an idea, a new one for him, too, that he is going to have something to say about the men who go to Madison next winter to make the laws, and as he has the power to decide the matter it will be interesting to note what his opinion is. Thus far but one candidate for governor on the republican ticket stands on a platform that really promised any relief from the present excessive taxation. It is possible, it is probable—that after the September primaries a strictly non-partisan ticket will be placed in the field headed by some business man of prominence throughout the state, to which the voters who desire a business administration of the people, for the people, and by the people, can rally to and support. Meanwhile the merry line of explanations are going on and the various candidates are plumping themselves to appear before the voters and seek their support, self-satisfied that they, each one, is the only political Moses to lead the children of Israel into the promised land in the race. Care should be taken in selecting candidates for the legislature. This is one of the most important branches of state affairs and should not be overlooked. It is all right to name a governor that favors reforms in the present management of affairs, but he would be powerless unless backed up by a legislature. This is the year that voters must think for themselves. Take out the tax receipts for the past few years and watch the totals that have slowly crept up that reform might be satisfied and the Wisconsin idea exploited.

Chicago has gone baseball mad with the prospects of having three pennant winning teams in the three leagues. If it should the three-cornered world's series would be an attraction worth going miles to see.

J. Pierpont Morgan, the younger, is a chip off the same block of dynamite that his father was. At least so Watchful, Waiting Woodrow must think.

Huerta was smooth enough to see that he was re-elected president of Mexico so he can assure the civilized world that he really is popular.

In Norway now, the nights are cool. At least that's what we learned in school. I'd like to spend the summer there. And cast aside dull aching care. I wish they would not send to me Those traveling folders, land and sea. They only aggravate the nose. And make a guy long for some place. Some place that he cannot forget. I do not think that will roam. I've gotta work. I'll stay at home. Because I'm paying yet, you know. For books I bought nine years ago. ### Unpleasant Passenger.

A large snake boarded a steam tramcar the other day as it was nearing the village of Balneria, Italy. It raised its head and hissed at the passengers, some of whom fainted. The conductor struck the reptile on the head, causing it to fall on the track. The car was then driven over its body.

Praise for English Schools.

"Whatever else we may say about the English schools, they do turn out well-behaved orderly boys and girls, respectful in those set over them, grounded in the morals of Christian civilization, with an instinctive sense of obedience to law and a becoming regard for the authorities that represent it. Would we be any the worse off if we had more of these qualities here?"—Whitelaw Reid.

"THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY"

Synopsis of the First Chapter

Stanley Hargrave, millionaire, having joined what he believed to be a great secret socialist movement finds that in reality he has been trapped by the Black Hundred. After a miraculous escape from the den of the brilliant thieves he lives the life of a recluse for eighteen years. One night, surrendering to a restless spirit of rebellion, Hargrave enters a Broadway restaurant and there comes face to face with the Black Hundred's leader, Braine.

After the meeting, during which neither man apparently recognizes the other, Hargrave hurries to his magnificent Riverdale home and lays plans for making his escape from the country. He writes a letter to the girls' school in New Jersey where eighteen years before he had mysteriously left on the doorstep of the institution his tiny baby daughter—named "Florence Gray" by the note attached to the bundle—and arranges that she be sent to him at once. He also pays a visit to the hangar of a daredevil aviator.

Braine and members of his band surround Hargrave's home at night, but as they enter the house the watchers outside see a balloon leave the roof. The safe is found empty—the million which Hargrave was known to have drawn that day gone. While the rogues are rummaging about the house, venting their spite, one of the men from outside bursts in. "The old man is dead and the money is at the bottom of the ocean," he cries. "We punctured her. She's gone!"

The Lure of The "CUT" Price

It's a common practice in many stores to "cut" on some standard article, the object being to attract the people with the bait, then sell them other goods at a big profit.

It's all a part of the circus, like the flaring red and yellow billboards—the idea is to get you inside the tent.

"What shall I do?" you ask; "shall I ignore the reductions and thus lose the chance of saving money?"

Of course not; take all the bargains you can get, but watch out for the sting in the other goods.

We don't reduce prices to use the reduction as a fish hook on our customers. Our goods are first marked at a small profit and reduced only when we can buy for less, when sizes are broken or when we have some other sane, sensible reason.

We believe that quality is what counts, and next to that low price.

Knights of Columbus of the Beloit and Janesville councils will hold a joint picnic on Sunday, July 26th, at Yost Park, and plans are being made under way to make the outing one of the most enjoyable which has ever been participated in by the members of the two lodges. Postmaster D. R. Worthington of Beloit spent several hours last night searching over the road between Beloit and Janesville in a futile effort to locate a white and black dog, which was the pride and boon companion of his young son. Leaving Janesville last evening after a long automobile trip with his wife and son, the dog was riding comfortably in the rear seat. On arriving at the club rooms, the puppy was missing, and Master Worthington was inconsolable. It was after one o'clock when Mr. and Mrs. Worthington returned after going over the road between here and the city in a vain search. Mr. Worthington is anxious to locate the dog, as he is a valuable one and much esteemed by his son.

Three Hundred Persons From Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin Enjoy Outing.

Three hundred persons enjoyed a picnic and clam bake dinner given by the plumbers' clubs of northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin, on Wednesday at the new beach picnic grounds just north of Beloit. In addition to the plumbers and their families from the two states there were a number of invited guests. The outing was set for Monday and Dohney waited for his "jury trial" in the Rock county jail, being unable to furnish the five hundred dollar bail set yesterday afternoon by Chief of Police Champion at the Court Exchange.

These were present from Janesville: W. C. Cochran, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest E. Clements, Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Green, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Snyder, and their families.

The feature of the day was the dinner prepared by "Old Dad" Klein of Beloit as caterer. The potatoes, clams and beans were baked under the ground by the old German, who attracted a good deal of attention during the day. Mr. Klein prepared digging a large hole in the ground, inserted the weeds for the purpose of producing a great amount of steam, and after which was laid over the hole a piece of canvas was a layer of dirt. The heat was carried through to the victuals, steaming them, and preparing them for use at the tables.

The Hatch nine-piece orchestra furnished music for the day. The day was a ball game, between teams from Southern Wisconsin and Northern Illinois was the center attraction. The former won the battle 13 to 11. Races between the cat men, team men, fat men and lean women were staged. In all, the event was a successful one and well attended. The entire number were present at the beach by ten o'clock, in the morning, all remaining until nine at night.

GOVERNMENT REPORT PLACES GRAIN YIELD FAR ABOVE AVERAGE

Aggregate of 5,256,000,000 Bushels is Estimated, Giving Second Best Record.

The five grain crops this year aggregate 5,256,000,000 bushels, or 700,000,000 bushels, equal to 13.5 per cent more than the harvest last year. The three grains, wheat, corn and oats, show nearly 5,000,000,000 bushels. This is the showing of the government report issued yesterday. It is the second best ever made, the record yield being 276,000,000 bushels more than the present estimates in 1912.

The wheat crop of 330,000,000 bushels, or 167,000,000 bushels above the record yield of last year, or 30,000,000 bushels over the June figures, is the main feature of the report for it exceeds expectations of the most enthusiastic.

With favorable conditions for the spring wheat crop in the northwest which is just coming into the heading stage in the southern sections, the 100,000,000 bushels mark may be reached in the final returns.

Exceeds Last Year Yield.
The winter wheat crop of 655,000,000 bushels is 17,000,000 bushels over the June figure and exceeds last year's bumper yield by 132,000,000 bushels. It is only 31,000,000 bushels less than the average crop of all wheat for the last five years.

Kansas stands far in the lead as the banner wheat producer, with 151,000,000 bushels, or 65,000,000 bushels over the June figure, which is almost as much as the Dakotas and Minnesota raised ten years ago. Oklahoma comes to the front with 42,000,000 bushels, an increase of 25,000,000 bushels and the largest by far that state has ever produced.

Norfolk sets a new mark with more than 68,000,000 bushels, or 10,000,000 bushels in excess of its big crop last year. These three states have 262,000,000 bushels, or 100,000,000 bushels more than last year's harvest.

Gains in South Dakota.
In the spring wheat country the estimated crop of 275,000,000 bushels, or 13,000,000 bushels larger than indicated a month ago, and 35,000,000 bushels over the June figures, is the promise of a big year. North Dakota has the promise of 35,000,000 bushels, leading all the states in its class. South Dakota, that has a partial failure last year, has the promise of 15,000,000 bushels increase, while Minnesota has a loss of 5,000,000 bushels. This is due to heavy rains of late.

Black rust is being found in parts of South Dakota and Minnesota, but so far no serious damage has resulted. With favorable weather for the rest of the growing season a material loss is not expected.

Area Acreage Reduced.
With a corn crop of 2,568,000,000 bushels, the third largest on record, there is promise of more than an average crop. The present estimates are 103,000,000 bushels, or 10,000,000 bushels over the June figure, and the government in July last of the

FORTUNE AWAITS WIFE OF FRISCO PUBLISHER KILLED IN ACCIDENT

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

San Francisco, July 9.—If there is a Mrs. Alfred E. Overend, widow of the late San Francisco publisher who was killed by a fall from a second story window a few months ago, and she will appear in Superior Judge Graham's court here and establish her identity, she will hear of something much to her advantage. Overend left a $100,000 estate and there is considerable doubt as to whom it should go. His friends did not know Overend was married until after his death, but from Mrs. Alfred Overend Mann of New York, the late publisher's cousin, Judge Graham received word that a half century ago he married a San Francisco cafe singer whom Mrs. Mann knew only as "Cross-eyed Ida." This Mrs. Overend is alive and can be found she will get a substantial slice of the estate. The only other heirs are known as the Guthrie group, but just whom the Guthries are nobody seems to know accurately. Judge Graham recently summoned Empire William Guthrie of the Pacific Coast Baseball league into court to see if he is one of them.

BURGULAR'S "CARD INDEX" SYSTEM IS COMPLETE.

Los Angeles, July 9.—When Roy Heart is put on trial here in the course of the next few days on a charge of burglary, one of the most interesting exhibits the state will introduce will be Heart's card index system. According to the police, whenever the prisoner secured a scrap of information he thought might sometime prove useful for burglarious purposes, he indexed it immediately. It is an excellent index well kept and very comprehensive. Such items are included as vulnerable avenues of entrance into stores, residences and offices, different families' usual hours of retiring, the number of their members, the value of their portable assets, whether they keep tools or firearms and hundreds of other clues, tips and suggestions which the authorities say might be interesting to any gossiping individual who would certainly not, they think, be card indexed by anyone with honest intentions.

OPERATION RESTORES REASON OF CONVICT

Surgeon's Knife Transforms Prison Convict to Sane and Honest Man.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Canon City, Colo., July 9.—A splinter of bone, lifted from his brain, and Jeff Lee, prisoner in the state penitentiary here, has been transformed from a criminal man to an honest man. Still in his early twenties, the surgeon's knife has wrought a miracle that will send the young man into the world a free man in every sense of the word, free from the penalty of the law, and free also from the malign influence that made him a thief and all around petty criminal.

A fall from a horse, when he was only fifteen, made of him a criminal, a vagrant, and finally a maniac. The removal of the splinter of the brain has revealed the pressure on the brain that short-circuited the nerve currents and perverted the lad's impulses and acts.

Jeff Lee is the son of a wealthy Texas planter. He was a healthy, normal youth, with a good record in his studies, and with many friends. When he was fifteen some of his boy friends dared him to ride an untamed horse. He accepted the challenge, and apparently conquered the beast after a sharp struggle. The he invited one of his girl friends to accompany him for a ride. They rode off together, and while they laughed and chatted, the horse, seeing an opportunity, suddenly reared and threw the youth. He was dashed violently to the ground, sustaining a fractured skull. He was taken home, and recovered, so far as his physical health was concerned.

But from that time he grew morose and sullen, in striking contrast to his former unvarying good nature. Then he began to seek the company of the roughs of the neighborhood, and to practice evil ways. Finally he was arrested and convicted on a charge of horse stealing. He went to the Texas penitentiary, and there, with hardened criminals as his willing tutors, he soon became versed in crime.

When he was released from the Texas prison he came to Colorado and soon became intimate with a criminal element. In a few months he was arrested on a charge of burglary. Lee was sentenced to from two to five years in the state prison. His second commitment seemed to prey on his mind. He showed signs of incipient insanity almost from the day of his entry, and within a few months he was sent to the insane ward, having become apparently a total maniac, with spells of violence.

The surgeon of the penitentiary became interested in the case, and believing an operation would restore his reason and possibly eliminate his criminal tendencies, an effort was made to locate his relatives so that their permission might be obtained. The prisoner, however, had concealed his true name and for a time efforts were fruitless. Then one day, a lucid interval came. Lee, recognizing his wretched plight, gave the names of his parents, and begged that the operation be performed. "I would rather die this minute than to go on living as a crook," he said. The parents gave their consent and four months ago the operation was performed. When Lee recovered from the numbing effects of the anesthetic, he was sane. Daily he recovered strength and a clearer intellect. Today he stands upright, with straight-forward gaze of the honest man. In a few months, with his minimum sentence expires, he will be released.

SPLendid MEMORIAL TOMB TO COLUMBUS PROPOSED; MOVEMENT BEGUN FOR ERECTION OF $500,000 MAUSOLEUM IN SANTO DOMINGO

Christopher Columbus and his flagship; Hon. William E. Pulliam.

A movement has been begun to get the peoples of the United States, of the twenty other republics of the North, Central and South America and of Canada to erect by popular subscription a splendid Pan-American tomb and memorial for Christopher Columbus in the city of Santo Domingo in the Dominican republic, where his remains are declared now to rest. The campaign for the memorial was begun one year ago by William E. Pulliam, at that time general receiver of Dominican customs.

YOU CAN'T ESCAPE THE TANGO; NOW IT HAS INVADDED THE BATHING BEACHES

Tangoing on the beach.

It's impossible to escape the tango, so you might as well become reconciled to it, if you aren't already. Now they're dancing it at the bathing beaches, the sea waves playing a fitting accompaniment.

HOW YOU MAY INFLUENCE ETERNITY

"Go make thy garden as fair as thou canst Thou'lt workest never alone."
Perchance he whose plot is next to thine
May see and mend his own."

WHEN Andrew Carnegie is asked what first aroused his interest in the use of free libraries he turns back pages of his life and tells about his boyhood. It seems that in Allegheny City, where he once lived, there was no public library. But a certain Colonel Anderson, a kind-hearted gentleman, opened his library of 400 volumes every Saturday afternoon to loan to those who could not afford to buy their own. Among these was the poor telegraph operator who later became the steel king of the world. The pleasure and profit which Colonel Anderson's kindness gave Andrew Carnegie was a seed planted in very fertile soil. It has already fruited into the gift of over twenty-two hundred libraries in the United States and Scotland, and nobody knows how much more fruit it may yet bear.

So far may the widening circles of one good deed reach. So long may the influence of one man's efforts to help his fellow men endure. Most of us would like to help and influence humanity in some great and wonderful way, but the humble helps that lie within our power scarcely seem worth while. We must not forget that their influence may become a far greater force than we dare dream of.

The inspiration of the widow's mite has helped to build many a beautiful cathedral. Colonel Anderson's humble gift of self and service has helped educate hundreds of thousands, nay millions of people.

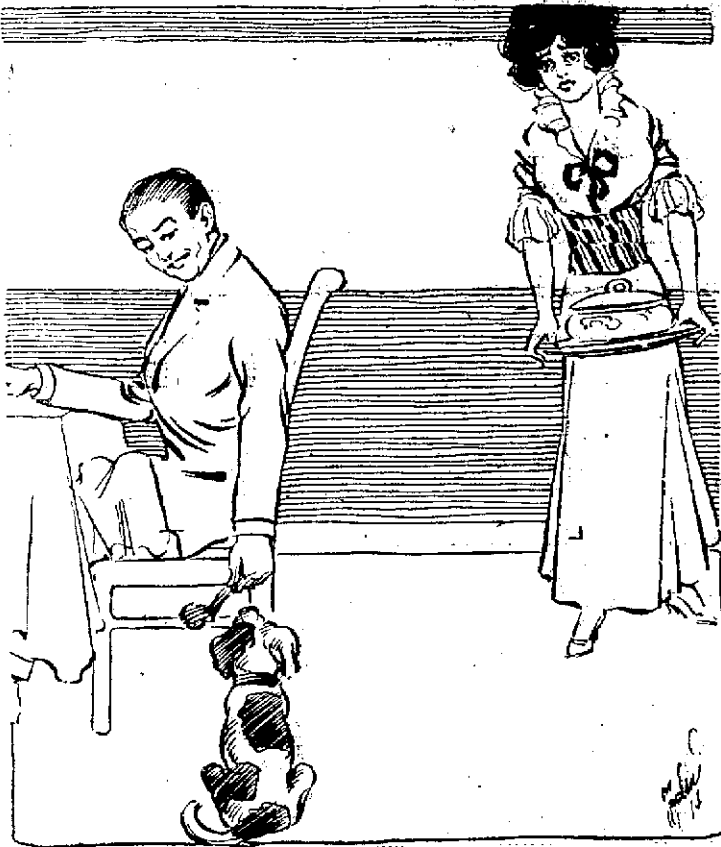

Mrs. Browning once asked Charles Kingsley what was the secret of his beautiful life and work. He answered, "I had a friend." We do not know the name of that friend, but we know that he owed much to him, for by his friendship he helped to make Charles Kingsley.

"All that I am and ever hope to be I owe to my aged mother," said Abraham Lincoln. She might have thought it did not matter whether she lived up to the best that was in her and taught the little country boy to worship the highest ideals of truth and justice, yet it did matter—and not to just a few people but to nations.

"Thou knowest not what argument thy life to thy neighbor's creed has lent," and not only to thy neighbor's creed, but to the millions of his neighbors whom he may influence.

Truly the possible power even of the humblest of us is a great and solemn thing. One is almost appalled by the thought of it, and yet we need not be. For after all, it is very simple. Of no man is required more than he can give. Just remember what Canon Farrar says, "The only real failure is not to be true to the best one knows up to that; give what you have and to the widening circles of blessed influence from your life may touch the shores of eternity."

XV.
An Unfortunate Discussion Over Canned Soup Proves the Undoing of What Might Have Been Nice Pork Chops.

It is quite fortunate for Peggy that a port chop, reposing idly on its side, has a very docile aspect. It might be thought that any domestic scientist, however unskilled, should be able to seize a pork chop by the hip, drop it gently in the pan, there to find it a moment later, turned to an ingratiating and delectable brown. So at least Peggy felt about it, and she set to her task with a light heart. All would have prospered, no doubt, had it not been for the soup. Peggy, anxious to show a little class and atone for her failure of yesterday, was serving some unusually nice canned soup. A discussion arose between Tom and Peggy, when she brought it on. Tom, maintaining that Peggy should not believe all that she read regarding soup on the backs of the magazines.

The pork chops, meantime, having attained the rich golden brown, their proper and most palatable state, proceeded, taking on a dark sepia hue, and finally they curled up crisply, uttering the most agonized spatters. Nor was Peggy's ire assuaged when Tom, after a tentative nibble, reached down and offered his to Sport. Thus ended the second canto of Peggy's domestic infelicities.

Every Day Talks To Every Day People

(BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.)

This is about a man and his wife who quarreled. As we are very well aware of the fact that it is not conventional for a man and his wife to quarrel and that all of us are very certain that we are living right up to the conventionalities, I'm sure this will not hit anyone.

This man worked like a beaver. He did not drink. He was what you could truthfully call a winner. That is to all outward appearances. But every bridge has its rotten plank. This man thought he was put on earth to do missionary work on his wife.

The woman in the case worked like a beaver too, and she also could stand in the class of winners. That is to all outward appearances. But every bridge has its rotten plank. This woman thought she was put on earth for some great, sublime purpose. Anything so prosaic as housekeeping—ah! shame on you for saying it! She also could down any Marathon talker, could travel along the verbal road at their shoulder for a lie she came right back with the announcement that this particular man was up in the cemetery. She figured her husband would not try to kill a poor fellow who had already cashed in his checks. Luckily the humor of it struck the man. A laugh will often clear up the family atmosphere where everything else failed. He laughed. Then she laughed. Now, we don't expect anyone to believe that they never quarreled again, but the man did make up his mind that they were both just two big foolish kids—that he was going to quit the pugilistic class and enter the ranks as a peace envoy.

He told his wife so. She decided to follow suit, and that man in the cemetery who had crossed the divide years before was really a help in the keeping of their promise.

Now, you might say that it is a very grievous wrong to lie about one who cannot rise up and defend themselves. So it is. But this little sketch only proves to you how blameworthy two people can be when they start to disagree. When you stop a minute to think about the last quarrel you and the very best partner in the world had, don't you think that you were blameworthy? It takes more of the right kind of courage to keep still than it does to enter the conversational race as a Marathon runner. Can you keep still?

CONVENIENCES FOR LETTER-WRITING.

There are other ways in which useful and attractive furniture can be obtained at low cost. The possibility of repairing and refinishing old furniture should not be overlooked. Old chairs, tables, desks, and other articles can often be made serviceable by small repairs and refinishing. If the original wood can be filled or stained, this as a rule is better than painting it. In these days of varnish removers, of ready mixed stains and varnishes and wax finishers, etc., the problem is not too difficult for the man, woman or child, who finds pleasure in such work and who can use sandpaper and brush and has some idea of making small repairs. Many a beautiful old chair, table, or other piece of furniture of mahogany, walnut, cherry, maple or some other good wood has gone from the farmhouse shed or kitchen into some town home because the one who purchased it, (and often for a very small sum), could see beyond the stained, worn, and battered surface the beauty of good wood and good workmanship which only needed careful refinishing to bring it out. Many an old desk has been found in an attic or used to hold old tools or odds and ends which has been repaired and refinished until it is again the useful and beautiful piece of furniture it was originally.

No farm home need be without a convenient place provided with paper, pencils, and so on, and always ready for the housekeeper's needs. To serve such a purpose nothing could be more simple than one which is described here and yet it is convenient and good to look at. A plain, broad shelf on wooden supports which can be made at home, or on iron ones which can be bought for a small sum, neatly finished and well equipped.

TO MAKE A FLOWER GARDEN

Some Useful Information for the Householder Who Wants to Raise Flowers.

By L. M. BENNINGTON.

Send for catalogues and order early, while there is a good choice of seeds and plants. Make a map and lay out the work so that no time will be lost when spring work begins.

Flowers Every Gardener Wants.

A bulb bed.

A border of hardy perennial flowers.

Annuals to fill in.

Vines for shade and screens.

A space in the vegetable garden for cut flowers.

A rose bed.

A border of wild flowers.

A window garden.

A few novelties and rarities.

Tools Every Gardener Wants.

A wheel hoe for straight rows.

A fork and rake to prepare for planting.

A push hoe for the weeds.

A set of children's tools for light work.

Grass shears to clip the edges of the beds.

Spraying outfit for insecticides and for watering.

Trowel and hand weeder.

Dibble to use in transplanting.

Other Utensils Every Gardener Wants.

A hotbed and a coldframe.

A garden line for straight planting.

A pair of gardener's gloves.

Stakes and dahlia poles for tall plants.

Chicken wire to use instead of stakes wherever possible.

Tobacco stems, kerosene emulsion and other standard insecticides.

Flower pots, seed pans, shallow boxes, sledge and rubber-bulb sprayer for window garden.

Water-Proofing Shoes.

While hot, apply to the soles of the shoes and the crease where the soles and upper join, being careful to fill in all the seams. The upper can be treated in the same manner and the shoes will be perfectly waterproofed.

Household Hint

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

Old hair brushes which have become quite soft can be made quite hard and firm again by dipping them in a strong solution of alum.

A little blueing and ammonia added to the water in washing windows will make them clear and easy to reach.

Before frying hamburger steak, mix the salt and pepper and a handful of cracker crumbs in it; gives it a fine flavor.

To renew rancid butter, cut in two or three parts and let stand in fresh milk five or six hours. Then remove and rinse in clear water. It will be as fresh as if just churned.

THE TABLE

Chocolate Mousse.—Two squares of baker's chocolate, one-half cup of powdered sugar, one cup of cream, three-quarters tablespoonful of granulated gelatine, three tablespoonfuls of boiling water, three-quarters cup of sugar, one teaspoonful of vanilla, one quart of cream. Melt the chocolate, add the powdered sugar, and gradually one cup of cream. Stir over the fire until the boiling point is reached, then add the gelatine dissolved in boiling water, sugar and vanilla. Strain the mixture into a bowl, set in a pan of ice water, stir constantly until the mixture thickens, then fold in the whip from the remaining cream. Mould, pack in ice and salt and let stand four hours.

Ox-tail Soup.—Cut a cleaned ox-tail, salt and ice and let stand four hours, then cut into five or six pieces. Take out the meat and put into a warmed soup-kettle while you fry a sliced onion in the dripping left in the frying pan. Turn this with the fat upon a piece of ox-tail, rinse out the frying pan with hot water and add this to the soup kettle. Now cover with two quarts of cold water; slice a carrot thin, mince four stalks of celery and add these to the water. Cover closely and simmer for five hours. Season to taste and set aside until the next day, remove the fat and strain the liquor from the meat and vegetables. Pick out the best joints and return to the soup. Heat to a fast boil, add kitchen bouquet to taste and serve. There should be two or three joints in each portion.

Cream Pie.—Two eggs, two cupfuls of milk, one cupful of sugar, one tablespoonful of cornstarch. Flavor with lemon or vanilla. Beat the yolks, sugar and cornstarch together and make like boiled custard; then put in a baked crust and set in a hot oven until it thickens. Beat the whites with a little sugar, flavor and put on top; brown in a hot oven. This makes one pie. One-half cupful of coconut, shredded, may be added to the filling.

Corn Omelet.—Grade the corn from four ears of boiled corn. Beat four eggs well, add three tablespoonfuls of cream and cook in a hot pan. When ready to fold, sprinkle with salt and pepper, add the corn and turn out on a hot dish. Heat the corn slightly over hot water before putting in the omelet.

Fruit Tarts.—Make rich pie crust, roll thin and line muffin tin with the crust, then take raspberries or strawberries, jam or preserves, and fill half full; bake in slow oven half an hour or forty-five minutes. When slightly cool fill with whipped cream and serve. This is a simple and delicious dish for a luncheon dessert.

Green Gooseberry Pudding.—Boil a pint of gooseberries till soft; add a teaspoonful of sugar. When cold mix in five well beaten eggs and two cupfuls of butter. Butter a mold and sprinkle thickly with flour and fine bread crumbs; then carefully pour in the mixture. Cover the top with bread crumbs and sugar to the depth of one inch; dot over with butter and bake one hour. Serve with cream.

Heart and Home Problems

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have no mother and am sixteen years old and have two sisters and one brother. I am trying to put my brother through high school.

(1) Do you think I ought to do this?

(2) I see for a living and make quite a bit of money. My father wants to take it all away from me. Do you think I am doing right by keeping some of it out, he drinks it all up?

(3) How can I stop my father from drinking?

(4) How can I make a white dress suitable for a four year old girl?

(5) I have heard people say that I was like a little old maid for caring for my brothers and sisters. Do you think so?

(6) I have a big range and the nicker work on the oven door has several spots on it. How can I get them off?

(7) How can I keep people from always telling me that I am pretty, as I do not like it?

LITTLE HOUSEKEEPER.

(1) I think you are doing quite right, dear little housekeeper. You ought to be very proud of his sister, and look forward to the day when he can repay her for what she does for him now.

(2) Your father should not have the money you earn. Use what you need and put the rest in a savings account.

(3) That is hard to say. If he hasn't sense and decency enough to stop for his own and his family's sake, it will be practically impossible to make him stop. You might persuade him to go to one of the drink-cure institutions. A "cure" which is said to work, if taken at home, is the following, which you can have the druggist put up for you—though I cannot vouch for the good results, as I have not used it:

5 grains sulphate of iron,
10 grains magnesia,
1 drachm nutmeg.

Dissolve in one-half pint lukewarm water, let stand until settled, which will be two or three days. Give teaspoonful of this twice every day. The recipe will need to be filled twice before it will cure, it is said. If your father won't take it, you can put it in his cup of coffee or whatever he drinks at home.

(5) I think you are a little darling and you needn't mind what people say.

(6) Rub the spots with sweet oil, to stop further rusting.

(7) Just don't think of it. If you are pretty, thank the Lord that you are good to look at, and let it go at that.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: What would be a nice letter to write to a girl I have never seen and whose name I received through a matrimonial paper?

As I don't know what your object is in writing to her, I can hardly say you to be on the safe side. So many people have been "done" through matrimonial papers that a man or woman takes a mighty long chance when he trusts any promises that come through such an agency.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I like a boy about twelve and his name is Lowell. Do you think it is a pretty name?

(2) We both go to the same school and he likes me very much, so I always wait for him after school. Do you think this is right?

(3) If giving a picnic, should you furnish all the lunch or should the children bring lunches?

(4) Should you pronounce "forehead" like "farhead"? If so, why? Thank you very much. HILDA.

(1) It is a pretty name.

(2) I see no harm in waiting for a little boy.

(3) That depends. If you want to give the children a particular treat and invite them, you furnish the lunch. But if you ask them to join you in a basket picnic, each one bringing a lunch, they might enjoy it almost as much.

(4) You have it spelled wrong. It is "forehead" and is pronounced as it was spelled "four-head."

AMERICAN GIRLS ARE LONDON RIVALS

Elsie Janis (top) and Ina Claire.

London has become the duelling ground for two rival queens of American musical comedy, Miss Elsie Janis and Miss Ina Claire. In "The Passing Show," a London equivalent for the "Follies," Miss Janis astounds and fascinates the multitude by her imitation of celebrities; and also her facility in dance and jest. With Sam Bernard in "The Belle of Bond Street," Miss Claire similarly interests with imitations, singing and dancing at intervals.

The KITCHEN CABINET

Fools make feasts and wise men eat them.

He is not well bred who cannot bear ill-breeding in others.

The busy man has few idle visitors; to the boiling pot the flies come not.

The honest man takes pains, and then enjoys pleasure; the knave takes pleasure and then suffers pains. — Benjamin Franklin.

CHERRIES ARE RIPE.

There is no fruit which quite takes the place of the cherry and the fresh, juicy and luscious fruit is best eaten fresh from the tree. As we have so short a season, it must needs be prolonged by various methods of preserving.

Now that the large Bing cherries are in market try putting them up for a delicious conserve to serve with meats in winter. Pit the cherries and cover with a fine cider vinegar and let them stand over night. In the morning take an equal weight of the drained cherries and sugar, mix well, put into a jar, stir until the sugar is dissolved, then place in the cellar with a cloth and plate over the jar. This may be dipped into as long as it lasts and will keep indefinitely.

Breakfast Cherries.—Chilled cherries with steams and leaves left on for garnish make a refreshing breakfast fruit. Another way liked by many is pitted cherries, well sugared and sprinkled with lemon juice in layers. Cherry pie is one that needs not to have its praises sung, for all mankind bow down to its merits.

Cherry Punch.—Place two slices of shredded pineapple in a bowl with three sliced oranges, the juice of four lemons and a pound of cherries that have been pitted and bruised. Cover with one and a half cupfuls of sugar and let the mixture stand two hours. Then press out the juice, add two cupfuls of Ceylon tea, one quart of ice water, two sliced bananas and a cupful of large cherries, cut in quarters. Add a block of ice and serve in punch glasses.

Cherry Salad.—Remove the stones from a pint of cherries, saving all the juice; fill the cavities with chopped celery and nuts. Chill and serve on lettuce leaves with a dressing made from the cherry juice, a little lemon juice, sugar, and olive oil if liked.

DR. BEATON WRITES FROM REGINA, SASK.

Former Janesville Pastor Has Been Spending a Week in North-western Province.

Dr. David Beaton writes the following interesting letter from Regina, Sask.:

"So much has transpired since I wrote you last that I can hardly think of myself as in the same world as southern California. I have followed the Pacific coast through British Columbia, then through those magnificent mountains of British Columbia, and along those roaring, plunging rivers, and feasted my eyes on the majestic rose hued mountains of the Rockies so that I can hardly realize that in this broad, quiet prairie land I am in the same terrestrial hemisphere. What a country! What spaces! What vistas! What scenes of busy human activity and nature's solitudes and shrines. I can not say which I like best, but am inclined to vote for the soil up the sound from Seattle to Victoria and from Victoria to Vancouver. Yet when I think of those noble river forces of the Fraser, the Columbia and the Kicking Horse on your way to the summit of the Rockies it is like a man trying to say whether he loves his wife or his mother most. I would not have missed this scenic trip for a ten years' lease of life.

The necessity of well organized associations of fruit growers for the purpose of gathering, picking and marketing the product is emphasized in a report of the United States chamber of commerce. The report states that the fruit of the United States is sold in a haphazard manner, and that the growers are not getting the best price for their product. The report also states that the fruit of the United States is sold in a haphazard manner, and that the growers are not getting the best price for their product.

I am also playing some golf here, but the greens are rough as a prairie dog. For a change, I have been playing some golf here, but the greens are rough as a prairie dog. For a change, I have been playing some golf here, but the greens are rough as a prairie dog.

DOMINION DAY tomorrow and then Independence day on the day after next, so I am celebrating the hundred years of peace, both by my address last Sunday and my taking part in the Dominion Day celebration.

Sincerely,
DAVID BEATON.

WRONG BREAKFAST

Change Gave Rugged Health.

Many persons think that for strength, they must begin the day with a breakfast of meat and other heavy foods. This is a mistake as anyone can easily discover for himself.

A W. Van, carpenter's experience may benefit others. He writes: "I used to be a very heavy breakfast eater, but finally indigestion caused me such distress, I became afraid to eat anything."

"My wife suggested a trial of Grape-Nuts and as I had to eat something or starve, I concluded to take her advice. She fixed me up a dish and I remarked at the time that the quality was all right, but the quantity was too small—I wanted a saucerful."

"But she said a small amount of Grape-Nuts went a long way and that I must eat it according to directions. So I started in with Grape-Nuts and cream. 2 soft boiled eggs and some crisp toast for breakfast."

"I cut out meats and a lot of other stuff I had been used to eating all my life and was gratified to see that I was getting better right along. I concluded I had struck the right thing and stuck to it. I had not only been eating improper food, but too much."

"I was working at the carpenter's trade at that time and thought that unless I had a hearty breakfast with plenty of meat, I would play out before my 'new breakfast.' I found I could do more work, felt better in every way, and now I am not bothered with indigestion."

RECORD FRUIT CROP EXPECTED THIS YEAR

Government Experts Predict Large Yield of Fruit of All Kinds Except in Peaches.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Washington, July 2.—A record fruit crop this year is predicted by the standing committee on statistics and standards of the United States chamber of commerce. In a report of investigations of trained observers all over the country it is stated that the general prospect for a large yield of fruit of all kinds, with the possible exception of peaches, has not been equaled at any time during the past decade, save in 1913.

The peach crop was severely damaged by the cold early spring. Oklahoma, most of Arkansas and a large part of Kansas suffered the heaviest loss to its peach crop. Damage to the peach crop was reported in south central Missouri, southern Mississippi, northern Alabama, Missouri and east Texas, southwestern Georgia, western Kentucky, western Tennessee, southern Iowa and portions of North Carolina. Elsewhere the outlook for the peach crop is so promising that a normal yield can be expected.

The price paid to the farmer for potatoes is about 48 per cent more this year than last year. The average farm price for potatoes this year is 71.4 cents a bushel, 22.2 higher than last year. In the eastern states gains in potato prices to farmers have been reported as follows: Maine, 24 cents; Vermont, 10 cents; Massachusetts, 21 cents; New York, 23 cents; New Jersey, 13 cents; Pennsylvania, 27 cents; West Virginia, 30 cents; Virginia, 14 cents; and North Carolina, 14 cents. In the central states, the increase ranged from 23.4 cents in Wisconsin to 36 cents in Indiana. Idaho, Washington and Oregon had the lowest prices with gains of 18, 10 and 17 cents respectively.

The department of agriculture is conducting experiments to test the value of visiting nurses in rural communities. In order to gain practical information on this subject, representatives of rural organization service of the department of agriculture helped the people of Chilton county, Alabama, to organize for the purpose of appointing a trained nurse and meeting her salary and expenses.

The county board appropriated $500, the school board $500, and private individuals $500, and with this $1,500 the services of a certified Red Cross nurse were secured for $600 a year and actual expenses. Features of the nurse's work have been school visiting, in which she examines pupils and delivers lectures, talks on the care of infants and general hygiene, at mothers' meetings, and actual sick nursing in severe illnesses. According to reports from the country the work of the nurse is meeting with great favor to the part of the authorities and residents.

Rose growers who allow the flowers to be damaged by the rose aphids have only themselves to blame, according to the department of agriculture. Although the aphid is widespread over the entire country, as well as abroad, it is easily controlled. Careful spraying of the plants with solutions of nicotine will chase the aphids at very small expense and trouble.

More than 3,900,000 acres of land in western states have been thrown open to homesteaders under the enlarged homestead act by Secretary of the Interior Lane during the past few weeks. The enlarged homestead designations are situated as follows:

Montana, 244,000 acres; Oregon, 900,000 acres; Washington, 170,000 acres; Idaho, 250,000 acres; New Mexico, over 400,000 acres; Arizona, 101,000 acres, and Colorado, 450,000 acres.

Secretary Lane has also emphasized his policy of restoring withdrawn land wherever the public interest will permit by recommending to the president the restoration of over 2,500,000 acres in western Wyoming. This land was withdrawn in 1905 because of reports of abundant coal underlying it. The geographical survey has shown these reports to be unfounded. The government still holds about 3,000,000 acres of coal land in Wyoming.

The secretary has also recommended the restoration of another area of 336,330 acres in Carbon county, Wyoming; 261,000 acres in northern Utah, and 68,000 acres in Socorro county, New Mexico.

DEFEND WISCONSIN PLAN OF REGULATING UTILITIES BY A STATE COMMISSION

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., July 2.—The indictments against state regulation of public utilities made by the Minnesota Home Rule league are not adequately supported, according to Clyde Lynde, King of New York, in an article in the National Municipal Review, just issued. The article is devoted entirely to the methods used by the Wisconsin utility commission in deciding public utility cases. One of the chief objections made by the league was that several of the cases decided by the Wisconsin commission have been taken into the courts.

"Delays due to appeals by public utility companies from the commission's decisions to the courts, if anything, prove only that the companies have not secured all they wanted from the commission. It is thus as much a recommendation for the action of the commission as a criticism of it. Indeed, the want of such appeals would show quite conclusively that the commission was giving to utilities such valuations as they themselves fixed upon their own properties."

The writer declares that the per cent of cases decided in favor of the public was not correctly reported by the Minnesota Home Rule league, and that many of its charges are unfounded.

"The public is in need of standards by which it may test whether its utility commissioners have a public point of view or are merely adjuncts to the very utility companies they are supposed to regulate," concluded Mr. Lynde.

"The Minnesota Home Rule league could have done much more than it has to set such standards and to point out the tests by which they may be measured. It has not adequately supported its indictments against state regulation in Wisconsin."

HOPE TO INCREASE FOREIGN EXPORTS

Exporters of Nation and Officials Meet in Convention—Step is Mutual One.

(By Windfall Jones.)

Washington, D. C., July 2.—The exporters of the nation plus some of the officials of the present administration have been holding a national convention in Washington for the purpose of devising ways and means for increasing our markets in foreign countries. The meeting was called the National Foreign Trade Convention.

This is a very natural move to make, after we had divided our home markets with the free foreign competition against our home producers. The purpose of the convention referred to the hope that we could sell our "raw material" abroad, and added that the value of the raw material consisted, from 50 to 90 per cent, in its cost.

It is a new kind of "raw material" which has 20 to 90 per cent of labor in it. As a matter of fact, "raw material" means material which has not been worked upon—which has no labor cost in it. The ore in the ground is raw material, but the ore that has been dug and smelted into a finished product of the smelter. Yet the pig iron is raw material to the steel mill, but the watch spring is its finished product. The watch spring is the finished product, but the delicately adjusted watch is its finished product.

What is raw material? Is it rain and sunshine that make things grow? Is it the farmer's sheep, or is it the farmer's wool, or the manufacturer's cloth or the tailor's suit of clothes?

Whose raw material is not the finished product of the producer lower down on the list?

And which class of producers, therefore, are to be sacrificed at the altar of the consumer? The producers or the consumers?

We pay our working people two to five times as much as does any European nation. We have been accomplished under a policy of a protective tariff—a tariff which first insured our home market exclusively to our home producers, even with American high wages and continuous employment.

Before protection to American labor ceased under the democratic tariff mills were unable to supply the market for their own products. That our great prospective nation wanted and was able to buy. We had no cry of "overproduction" but only the complaint that business men could not keep up with their orders. The new factories could be completed. All production was working overtime.

And now, in less than a year after free-trade and the Wilson administration have taken the market for the old, weary cry, "overproduction" and concede that there is a "spirit" of unrest and depression, and they want the diplomats to help sell our surplus corn, even while shipload after shipload of corn and other grains are imported from South America, free, into this greatest of all farm countries.

President Wilson has made a bad matter worse by challenging the right of American business men to unite in protests against the business-destroying policies of the Wilson administration and a democratic congress. Nothing more unwise or more imprudent has emanated from the White House than his recent remarks, in condemnation of the action of business men and business organizations in sending letters to Washington urging a cessation of attacks on business.

The real and actual grievances of business are only emphasized by the president's ill-natured treatment of the matter.

His judgment is plainly faulty when he scolds business men because they do not join in such a request? Are they to be reprimanded and brought under the schoolmaster's frown for doing what they can to bring about a return of normal business prosperity?

Piffle, and again piffle. They have a reason enough and a right for their remonstrances and petitions.

In his hasty and ill-considered imputation of "conspiracy" on the part of the business interests that are asking relief from injurious government policies President Wilson makes a new record of egotistic stubbornness, intolerance, and lack of common sense. It will prove to be an impotent action. Business has rights which politicians, even a politician occupying the presidential chair, are bound to respect. The business men whom the president "rebuked" will be heard from at the polls next November.

Why the Boiler Rumbles.

That noisy rumbling and clattering in the kitchen boiler after the gas water heater has been lighted for some time has scared many a woman. The editor of Monthly Gas Chat says it need alarm no one as it is caused by the expansion of the water as it is heated from the top of the boiler. The colder water below, rushing up to displace the expanded water above, will often cause a concussion.

The Lapse of Enoch Wentworth

Suddenly, as the last remnant of an old scab sloughs off, every fragment of hatred, of resentment at injustice, of pain and rebellion which for ten months had been warping his nature and clouding his life fell away from Merry's heart. The love, the implicit confidence, even the boyish dependence upon the older man, came flooding back into his soul like a high tide. All that had stood between him and Wentworth seemed unimportant compared with the vital fact that they had been and still were friends.

When the nurse beckoned he stole noiselessly across the floor. She pointed to a chair by the bedside. "He has dozed off," she explained in a low whisper. "He asked for you just before he went to sleep. I told him you were coming. Sit here so that he can see you when he wakes up."

Merry dropped into the chair. He began to see perfectly through the gloom. Wentworth's grim, gaunt face had startled him for a minute. The eyelids were closed, with depths of shadow below them. The man's dominating nose stood out like a silhouette against the white pillow. The mustache had been shaved away and lines, chiseled by days and nights of pain, wrinkled about the quiet mouth. Merry sat staring at the haggard face with a dull, tugging hope in his soul, which he could not voice even to Dorcas. He wanted time—time enough to tell Enoch that the old enmity was dead, that the old love was alive, strengthened by new ties. A spasm of pain ran through the sick man's face, wrinkling the pallid forehead and twitching the lips. Merry looked up at the nurse. She read the question in his eyes.

"No," she whispered, "he is going to live. His brain is clear now. He has a great constitution. That was the only thing that saved him."

The woman had a strong, intelligent face and her manner was full of calm conviction. She was not young and must have watched over many a battle between life and death. She knew! Merry sighed with relief and peace of mind, even with a mad throb of joy. The thought of Dorcas and the future came with the conviction that there was still time to take up the old bonds of love and to begin life again.

The face upon the pillow moved and Enoch's eyes opened slowly. Recognition flashed into them, then a smile crept about the lined mouth.

"Enoch!" The young man dropped on his knees beside the bed, his fingers stole under the sheet and caught in a strong grasp the hand which he had thought was slipping from his reach.

Wentworth's eyes held a breathless question. "You were not hurt?" he whispered.

"No, old man; no. I didn't have a scratch. You took it all. You saved my life, as you have done more than once, and, Enoch, you understand—we are back where we stood in the old days, with everything forgotten, everything buried, buried so deep that neither of us will ever give it another thought."

The thrill of warmth over that strongest of all things human—a broken friendship made warm and secure again—ran like the vigor of transfused blood through the veins of the sick man. Happiness flushed into the wan face and his feeble strength returned Merry's grip.

Andrew laughed aloud. "You understand, Enoch, we are friends—friends that nothing can separate again as long as life lasts."

The wistfulness of gratitude dimmed the eyes of the sick man. "As long as life lasts! That won't be a great while, Boy," he whispered huskily; "only now—it is all right—and it seems different. I felt like a coward a little while ago. You remember that writing chap who died lately? He said something just before he went. I thought of it this morning—I'm afraid to go home in the dark—wasn't that what he said? I felt lonely—and I know—"

"Listen, Enoch," Merry spoke with a tone of passionate conviction. "Look here, old man, you're not going home in the dark, not yet. You've got thirty or forty years before that homegoing."

He turned imperatively to the nurse. "Push back the curtains, won't you? Push them away back. There's a glorious sun shining—let it in."

The woman understood. She ran up a curtain and flung back the shutters. The room grew suddenly white and radiant.

"There!" cried Merry. "Talk of going home in the dark? See how the sun is shining! Go home in the dark, the idea!"

A pathetic eagerness flushed into the eyes of the man on the bed. The glare of the sunshine showed clearly the wanness and ghastly shadows in the bandaged face.

"She says," the actor pointed over his shoulder at the white-gowned nurse, "she says you are out on the highroad—coming back to stay with us—indeed, you understand, Enoch? She knows. Don't you?" He looked into the woman's face with ardent pleading in his eyes.

She smiled and nodded. She was the embodiment of health and vigor. Her stalwart body and her wholesome rosy face were pleasant for sick eyes to look upon. "Yes, you've come back," she said emphatically. "When the doctor left an hour ago he said we had pulled you safely around the corner. Now all the job I have cut out for me is to see you are kept quiet and patient and happy."

"Yes, happy—that's the biggest part of the prescription," repeated Merry with a laugh.

The sick man looked up. The confession in his eyes was pathetic. "It seems ages since I was happy, Boy."

"Well, you're not going to be allowed to think, even to think of past ages. You've only to lie there and get well. It is our business—a sort of job cut out for Dorcas and me—to keep you happy. See?"

"I see," whispered Enoch. The flicker of a smile stole into his face. It brought peace and a pale, eager hopefulness, as if a thought of restitution and atonement was dawning in the man's soul. The nurse lowered the curtain and blotted out the radiance which flooded the room.

"The doctor has ordered quiet," she whispered, "and sleep—as much sleep as possible."

Merry rose and laid his hand on Wentworth's forehead. "You hear her orders, old man?" He laughed gaily. "It's no use running full tilt against the nursing profession. Each one of them thinks she knows it all! But I'm not going to say 'Good-by.' I mean to hang around here from dawn to dark and drop in every time I can sneak past her—or the doctor!"

CHAPTER XXVI.

A Moral Lesson.

Occasionally during Enoch's convalescence Dorcas found him listening to common noises about the house with a feverish anxiety which was half-terror.

"I don't know what he wants," said the nurse one day. "I wish I could find out. The doctor orders me not to bring up any subject that might disturb him. There's something on his mind, something that harasses him. Yesterday I stood on the stair speaking to Mrs. Volk and I left him asleep. When I went back he was leaning on his elbow and his eyes were fixed on the door as if he dreamed seeing some one come in. He asked who the woman was I had been talking to. His temperature had gone up. I wish I knew what he is worrying about."

"I think I understand," said Dorcas.

She returned to the sickroom carrying a bit of needlework. An eager smile came into her brother's eyes when she opened the door. He lay propped up with pillows. She sat down beside his bed. "Shall I read?" she asked.

"No; go on with your sewing. I like to see your hands fly with that bright silk between your fingers. Men have an idea that women are one-sided creatures. They are mistaken. You sew beautifully, and yet, while you stitch, I think of your 'Cordelia.'"

It was the first time since his accident that Wentworth had mentioned the theater or business of any sort. Dorcas began to trace out the pattern she was embroidering with the point of her needle. Her fingers trembled. She spoke without looking up.

"You haven't cared to hear about business, Enoch. There are some things you may want to know, since you are strong again. Mr. Oswald sailed for England a fortnight ago. He hated to go, leaving you before the critical point was passed, but the Strand Theater offered open time for August and it had to be attended to. He is rehearsing an English company now for 'The House.'"

"Didn't he want you for it?" asked Wentworth.

"Yes; but I should not have gone even if you had been well. He has given 'Cordelia' to Miss Embury, an English girl. He says she will play it beautifully. We are to open here on the twentieth of October. The whole company has been re-engaged. Mr. Oswald said he did not believe you would care to make any changes. There is only one new member—Helen Capron will play 'Mrs. Esterbrook.' Miss Paget went to London three weeks ago."

Dorcas did not raise her eyes while she spoke. The silk thread had knotted and she sat disentangling it with her needle.

"As soon as you are able to travel we are going to take you away somewhere. The city is hot."

Enoch stared out at the window. "Who is 'we'?" he questioned.

A wave of scarlet crept across the girl's face.

"Andrew Merry has offered to help care for you until you are quite strong again," she answered without raising her eyes.

There still were gray shadows in his face and wan hollows and wrinkles about his mouth. His hair had whitened at the temples. Physically the man had changed, but a new tranquility had begun to smooth away lines of worry and care in the colorless face.

"And begin life over again?" he asked.

"Yes," said the girl gently. "A pathetic eagerness came into his face; then it grew still with the gravity of a man who had almost touched hands with death. Into the wrinkles about his mouth crept the old dogged determination, tempered by a humility which Dorcas had never seen before. She flung her work aside, dropped on her knees, and drew her brother's face close against her own.

"Dorcy," he said after a long silence, "when Andrew comes I want to see him alone."

"He is downstairs now," she answered.

"Send him up, won't you—and do you mind if he comes alone? Afterwards I want you."

The girl hesitated. "Of course. But do you think you are strong enough to visit much?"

"I spoke to the doctor this morning and he said talking would not hurt unless I got excited. Andrew isn't an exciting fellow."

"You're looking uncommonly well for a sick man," said Merry when he entered the room a few moments later. "So do you, Boy!" Enoch's eyes crinkled with a smile. "You look happy—tremendously happy."

"Of course, I am tremendously happy. Why shouldn't I be tremendously happy? I never saw a more glorious day; I have you back, well and strong, the same staunch old friend you always were; I've signed a contract for next season in figures which would have given me dizzy spells five years ago, and—"

"And—?" A pathetic eagerness came into Enoch's face.

"Why, bless my soul, isn't that enough to set the average human on transcendental stilts?"

"Andrew, you're half angel!" cried Wentworth. There was a quaver in his voice.

"Half angel, you ridiculous old muddle-head!" Merry smiled in his engaging way. "There's no surplus of angel fiber in any man—angels are feminine." The comedian's eyes became grave for a moment. "Still, I might have been gadding about on wings today if it hadn't been for you. Your courage—"

"Courage!" Wentworth started as if he had been struck. "Andrew, never use that word about me again! I wasn't courage that made me snatch you from death. Oftentimes men who in cold blood are utter cowards leap forward and rescue some one from death. That isn't courage! He paused, as if a word had escaped him. "It is blind, instinctive impulse—the natural impulse you find even in a savage."

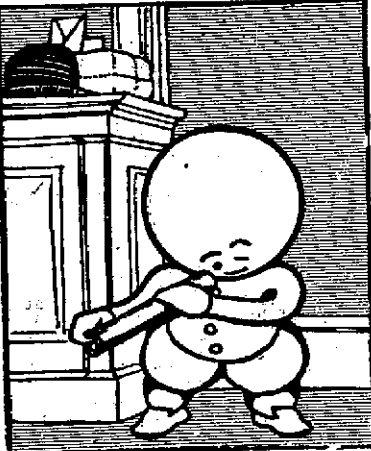

"You're too weak yet to argue," Merry's voice was conclusive. "Only one thing is certain," he turned his thumb toward the floor; "I am here instead of there."

"Andrew," the sick man's face flushed, "take these." He pulled a bunch of small keys, threaded upon a steel ring, from under his pillow. "Won't you unlock the little drawer at the left of my desk and bring it to me?"

FATHER'S JOB.

"So you and your mother both work? What does your father do?"

"Oh, he gets Ma and me up and off to work in the morning."

Dinner Stories

The foxiness of father was referred to at a recent social affair when Senator George Sutherland of Utah was reminded of an incident along that line.

Some time ago, the senator said, a pretty little baby girl arrived at a happy suburban home and immediately the entire family, including aunts, cousins and mothers-in-law, were busy selecting an appropriate name.

"Harry," joyously cried mother, when the old man returned home one evening, "I have decided on a name for the baby. We will call her Gwendolyn."

For a moment father did a hard piece of thinking. The name Gwendolyn sounded to him like a fire whistle-out of tune, but he knew better than to openly to oppose mother. Therefore he grew foxy.

"Gwendolyn, Gwendolyn," he musingly replied. "I like that a whole lot, dear. Long before I met you I had a girl named Gwendolyn and she—"

"Who said anything about Gwendolyn?" icily interjected wife. "Your hearing must be defective. I said we will call the baby Mary, after mother."

It was in Egypt, and the old lady in the tourist party was much interested in the camel-boy and his camel. "Is he a good animal?" asked the lady.

"Yes, ma'am," responded the boy. "And you treat him well?"

"Aye, lady; I've driven that camel over five years, and never once struck him a single blow."

"Dear me! Such humane treatment of dumb animals is worthy of consideration. Here is a piece of silver for you."

"Thank you, lady, very much. No, I never strike Ramezes. I twist his blooming tail."

Unmusical Sausalito. Evidently the neighbors didn't think much of the singing of Antonio, a Sausalito (Cal.) fisherman, for he was arrested and fined on a charge of disturbing the peace. "Dees town she no lika da moos," said Antonio sadly, in speaking of his vocal exclamation. "Dees peop' no on'erstan'. New York she geeva da Carus' $2,500 for seeng one song. Me I seeng da Sausalito' for no'ting and da judge say twent'-fi' dollar!"

Trials Breed Strength. Poverty is very terrible, and sometimes kills the very soul within us; but it is the north wind that lashes men into Vikings; it is the soft, luscious south wind which lulls them to lotus dreams.—Ouida.

ONLY SIXTEEN, GIRL VERY SICK

Tells How She Was Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

New Orleans, La.—"I take pleasure in writing these lines to express my gratitude to you. I am only 16 years old and work in a tobacco factory. I have been in a very sick girl but I have improved wonderfully since taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am now looking fine and feeling a thousand times better."

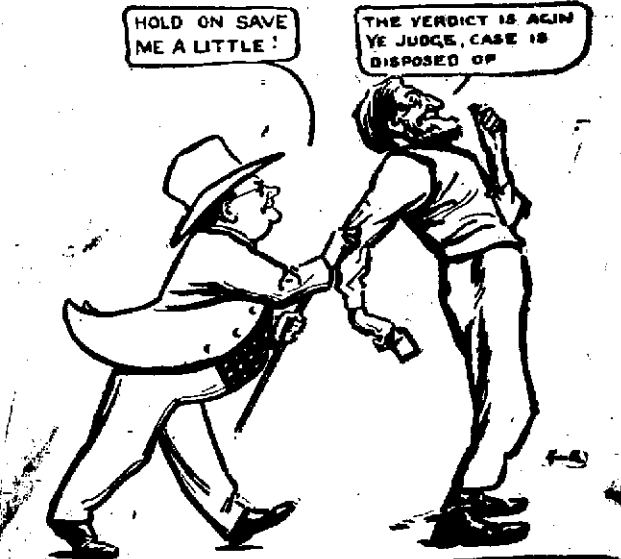

—Miss AMELIA JAQUILLARD, 3961 Tchoupitoulas St., New Orleans, La.

St. Clair, Pa.—"My mother was alarmed because I was troubled with suppression and had pains in my back and side, and severe headaches. I had pimples on my face, my complexion was sallow, my sleep was disturbed, I had nervous spells, was very tired and had no ambition. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has worked like a charm in my case and has regulated me. I worked in a mill among hundreds of girls and have recommended your medicine to many of them."

—Miss ESTELLA MAGUIRE, 110 Thwing St., St. Clair, Pa.

There is nothing that teaches more than experience. Therefore, such letters from girls who have suffered and were restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should be a lesson to others. The same remedy is within reach of all.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

THE OLD TIMER IS ON TO THE REAL TOBACCO CHEW

DON'T take a big chew. Just a nibble will satisfy you, because "Right-Cut" is the Real Tobacco Chew.

Taste it, smell it—see how different it is from ordinary tobacco.

By the time you've used up half a pouch you'll be telling your friends about it, same as the men you hear talking about it now.

Pure, rich, sappy tobacco—seasoned and sweetened just enough.

Take a very small chew—less than one-quarter the old size. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just nibble on it until you find the strength chew that suits you. Tuck it away. Then let it rest. See how easily and evenly the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies without grinding, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is the Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end.

It is a ready chew, cut fine and short shred so that you won't have to grind on it with your teeth. Grinding on ordinary candied tobacco makes you spit too much.

The taste of pure, rich tobacco does not need to be covered up with molasses and licorice. Notice how the salt brings out the rich tobacco taste in "Right-Cut."

If your dealer does not sell it, send us 10c. in stamps for a pouch of "Right-Cut" Chewing Tobacco.
